

What Makes A Successful Susan Curtis Camper?!

Camp Susan Curtis is an award-winning program that welcomes a diverse group of Maine students each summer. To make sure that camp will be a good fit for both camp and the student, here are a few things to keep in mind as you nominate potential campers.

-  Campers MUST qualify for Free/Reduced Lunch, Food Stamps, TANF, or be in the care of the State (this includes Foster Care) Families are expected to pay a $35 Registration Fee for each camper. We know it can be difficult for families to pay for multiple campers. We offer a rate of $50 for 2 campers and $65 for 3 or more campers/family. The remainder of the tuition ($1,200) is raised yearly by the Susan L. Curtis Charitable Foundation.
-  A student with limited summer opportunities. Camp Susan Curtis was created to offer Maine youth with limited opportunities a summer experience. Because of our waiting list, we do ask that you consider students who do not attend other residential camp programs.
-  A student who can meet the challenges of the camp environment. As a recreational learning program, we encourage you to refer students who will embrace living, learning, and playing in a highly social outdoor group setting. If they find socializing a challenge at home, school, or other activities then they may not find camp to be a good fit for their personality.
-  A student who is physically and emotionally healthy. Campers must be able to perform basic hygiene tasks independently (shower/ toilet), navigate rough terrain, and follow safety instructions. We are unable to accommodate youth who require 1-on-1 assistance, have a history of psychiatric hospitalization, violent behaviors, severe mental or physical health needs, have not stabilized on medications, or are enrolled in day treatment or residential programs.
-  A student with good attendance. We want campers to be successful when they return to the school environment. Students with good attendance are more likely to attend camp and return to school with new and/or improved skills for learning.
-  A student with a family who is willing to let them have their own experience. Families who say “we will try it for a week” or “I need to speak with my child daily” are not ready for camp. These families tend to not show up for their session, can be anxious or homesick or do not complete the session because they have been promised that they can leave when challenges arise.
-  A student who can adjust to new situations. Camp can be very hot, very wet, very cold, very buggy and without screen time. Food may be new, the living situation is new, and there are new friends and new activities. Though most campers find this an exciting adventure and excel, some may be overwhelmed by all the newness.
-  A family that can provide or arrange for transportation. In most situations, transportation is the responsibility of the family. This does not just include the transportation back and forth but may include transportation to pick up a camper in an emergency or behavior situation.

CSC relies on the Referral Partner to nominate the best candidates. Please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions about your potential referral. We place no restrictions on acceptance for those that meet the above criteria and we encourage diversity in race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, age, religion, family composition, learning ability, and political belief.
